"A Cumberland Romance"

in every to the highest bidder has become generally recognized as a common expedient to bring wealth into a decaying family. Such a social procedure provides the dramatic background of Vitaphone's newest picture, "Slaves of Pride," of which Alice Joyce is the star.

"Slaves of Pride" will be the attraction at the Columbus Theater on Wednesday, September 22nd.

Miss Joyce plays the role of Patricia Leeds. She is fifteen years old and just beginning to bud into beautiful womanhood as the story opens. Jason Leeds, the father, is drawn into virtual bankruptcy by the great extravagance of his wife.

The collapse of his fortune causes Leeds to kill himself with a bullet, leaving a meager estate sufficient to maintain his widow and daughter in frugal fashion for a few years. Mrs. Leeds, still enslaved to the desire for wealth and social ambition, turns to her daughter as the only alternative for the gaining of great wealth. For ten years Mrs. Leeds changes the beautiful girl before many different wealthy marriageable men. Likeable young men unpossessed of money would have been natural companions of the girl, as denied to her. More mature men having the desired assets quickly see through the treachery of the mother. Meantime Patricia, inspired by innocence and pride, refuses to be a dupe.

Finally Mrs. Leeds succeeds in maneuvering the unwilling girl into an engagement to Brewster Howard, an excessively wealthy and proud man of thirty-five years. Their marriage and subsequent experience serves dramatically to expose the evil of marriages for money.

"Fists and Fodder" will be the comedy for that day.

Falls Off of Bull Right Into Love.

An untutored mountain girl of great beauty who blooms like a flower under the influence of love; such is the star's role in "A Cumberland Romance" in which Mary Miles Minter will be presented at the Columbus Theater on Friday September 24th.

John Fox, Jr., wrote the delicate idyll of the Cumberland, a fact which in itself is a high advertisement for the production. Everyone remembers his "Trail of the Lonesome Pine" and "The Little Shepherd of Kingdom Come."

It goes without saying that as "Father" Miss Minter has a part which displays her beauty and acting ability at its absolute best. She carries with equal conviction clever comedy moments or well-sustained dramatic situations, of which many abound in this tense story of a mountain lover, a city rival and a maiden whose hand in marriage is the prize.

Decidedly unique is the introduction of Esther to Clayton, the city man. She is veritably cascaded into his arms from the back of a big bull, a strange saddle animal even in the Cumberland.

Charles Maizus wrote the scenario and also directed the picture, a fact which insures it to be a completely artistic offering. "The Copperhead," directed by Charles Maizus, is being acclaimed as one of the greatest cinema triumphs of the year.

The four characters directly supporting the star have very strong roles, and Hollywood's entire supply of screen talent was carefully combed that the roles might be assigned with absolute exactitude. Those who know ability will appreciate the choice of Monte Rio as the leading man, "Shred Raines," John Bowers as "Clayton," and Guy Oliver and Martha Malloy as the mountain parents.

Shackleton Had a Wondrous Trip.

The Sir Ernest Shackleton South Pole expedition which was gone two years in the icy Southland, and which brought back the motion pictures which have been called "The Bottom of the World" and released by Robertson-Cole, went into the Antarctic Circle purely for scientific purposes. The pole had been discovered by Amundsen not long before, so the Shackleton expedition was one which could afford to take its time and inspect the land, its animals and weather at leisure.

When "The Bottom of the World" shows at the Columbus Theater on Thursday, September 23, it will prove a treat to all, no matter whether the spectator be of scientific or curious turn of mind. For the picture is one of long succession of polar marvels, stressing situations which have been overlooked in other similar pictures, and bringing to mind countless new phases of arctic life.

For instance pictures are shown of South Georgia, which is the outpost of Southern habitation, a bleak forbidding country where Shackleton just touched when he started into Polar seas. Then there are interesting pictures of the dogs which were taken along by the hundred, of the tremendous ice bergs with which the ship battles, of the raising of deep sea specimens through the ice, of the disability of Shackleton's ship, the Endurance, of the great race jump with provisions low, and of the monstrous sea animal which the trail leads of the expedition fought after the Endurance was washed.

Special Attractions At Onyx Theater

"Hay Foot, Straw Foot" at Onyx Theater Saturday, Sept. 18.

Circus day in Springfield, Ill., is indirectly responsible for Charles Hay being a screen favorite today. His father had intended a business career for him but then, when the circus and Charles with several other boys, carried a basket of water to the elephant for a game. This washed into him all aspirations for a commercial life.

He followed his father's wishes, completing his schooling in the Los Angeles Polytechnic school, but the inspiration of the sawdust ring still stirred his soul and he was wont to hang around local theaters. He graduated as program boy, waiter boy and usher and finally landed on the stage as a "super."

After successfully picturing minor parts, he took several flyers at the road but his stage career came to a sudden close when the Metropolitan Combined Musical and Dramatic aggregation closed at San Francisco and Other unexpectedly.

He returned to Los Angeles and decided before taking up a business career to try the pictures. He tried out in Inevitable and put up his case to Thomas H. Ince, who sympathized with the youth and gave him a chance. This was in December, 1912 and it was the beginning of the screen career of the Thomas H. Ince "wonder boy," a title he won by his remarkable portrayal of the fervent, nervous, high-strung boy of "The Granger."

His latest picture, "Hay Foot, Straw Foot," will be seen at the Onyx Theater Saturday night, September 18th. This is a charming photoplay and Doris Lee is his leading woman.

"After His Own Heart," at Onyx Theater Monday, Sept. 20.

"After His Own Heart," to be shown at the Onyx Theater Monday, September 20, with Hale Hamilton in the starring role, is a Metro comedy drama which furnishes an amusing and entertaining plot.

Mr. Hamilton will be seen in the role of Thomas Westworth Duncan, a healthy and virile young man who is offered a large sum of money to sell his heart to a worn-out millionaire and in return accept the battered organ of the older man. The scheme has been concocted by a doctor whose supreme egotism makes him believe himself capable of performing the miraculous operation. Tom is led into the project through a spirit of adventure mixed with necessity as he has just learned that his vast fortune has been lost by a dishonest trustee. To make matters worse he had fallen in love with a charming Sally Reeves, but without a penny to his name he cannot ask her to marry him. The variety of unusual incidents which lead to the amazing climax makes a picture of extreme originality that bids fair to be one of the classics of screen humor. In it Mr. Hamilton is seen at his best and is ably supported by a strong cast.

"Respectable by Proxy," at Onyx Theater Wednesday, Sept. 22.

The Onyx Theater takes pleasure in announcing that it has secured J. Stuart Blackton's newest photoplay, "Respectable by Proxy," for its future attraction for Wednesday, September 22. Sylvia Hansen and Robert Gordon, the popular co-stars, are herein provided with a delightfully spicy, romantic comedy.

"Respectable by Proxy" is said to be something really novel in plot. The idea is for the story was furnished by Florence Myott, the screen adaptation being the work of Stanley Olmstead. Mr. Blackton selected cast with care, entrusting important roles to Eulalie Jensen, William H. Dunn, Beale Stinson, Margaret Barry and Morgan Thorpe.

JAIME C. DE VEYRA

An Irishman's Point of View?

For three years from his cellar shop window William Grogan, journeyman plumber, had seen the same two shapely feet trip lightly by Saturdays and minus the gap of July and August led him to the conclusion that she was a school teacher. He had never seen her face, and yet he fell in love with the girl whose feet twinkled past every day. In quest of adventure, he put himself aboard a ship for a trip around the world. The pair of feet was on the same boat. Mystery, adventure, treachery and love, with the strange luck of the Irish, make this story a thrilling romance indeed.

"The Luck of the Irish" is an Allan Dwan screen adaptation of Harold MacGrath's most popular novel by the same name. It is the feature attraction at the Columbus Theater for Sunday, September 19.

Tsuri Aoki Plays in "Bonds of Honor."

Tsuri Aoki, the dainty little Japanese star, is charmingly ingenious in the role of Yoku-Ko in "Bonds of Honor," the virile Japanese drama starring Ressue Hayakawa. The production is from the Haworth Pictures Corporation and is released by Exhibitors Mutual Distributing Corporation.

The fascinating little actress is in private life the wife of Ressue Hayakawa, with whom she has appeared in many of his most successful pictures. Although a native of Japan Tsuri Aoki has received practically her entire education in this country, having been brought to California as a child. Not the least attraction of this little woman's art is the naive and endearingness with which she lives her roles. "Bonds of Honor" is the feature for Monday, September 20th, at the Columbus Theater.

The comedy for that night will be "Oh You Kid!"
